I keep a few of these items in my game bag at all times. Some Tactics 1. Train the fingers. Before the game starts, the first thing you will want to do is to train your fingers to work together. The fingers will be the key to your success, because they will determine whether you are able to keep your bases up or to tap a card from the deck. This handout will teach you how to hold the cards, and how to keep your fingers still while they are working. The finger position is similar to “poker” hand placement. 2. Avoid Two-Finger Shuffle. Your fingers will need a lot of training if you don't want them to keep shuffling while you are trying to draw a card. The best thing to do is to avoid shuffling two cards together with your first two fingers. This is easier than it sounds, but you need to practice it until you can do it with one hand alone. 3. Draw with one hand, hold with another. This is the easiest way to do a shuffle, but it takes longer and your cards are more likely to be shuffled out of order. You will need to practice this, so that you will be able to do it with one hand alone. The first time you do this, you will probably need to take your first card from the bottom of the deck. 4. Cut the deck while keeping your eyes down. Your eyes will be the key in keeping track of the cards you've shuffled, and of what's in your hand. It's a good idea to cut the deck of cards while it's still face down, to give yourself more time to keep your eyes down. This is harder than it sounds, so you will need to practice it until it's a habit. 5. Practice shuffle while keeping your eyes down. You will need a lot of
