We were all pretty impressed with Canadian actor Jason Mewes's performance in The Raid 2, and now, we've got another reason to be impressed with Mewes's acting skills. Mewes took part in the video game adaptation of The Raid 2, and he definitely shines on screen. In the latest episode of Conan O'Brien's Game Time, Conan brought Mewes on board to watch him play The Raid 2 in real time. For those who haven't seen it, the game puts you in the middle of a high-stress hostage situation, and you must work through various situations in order to escape. The Raid 2: Redemption is coming to PlayStation 3, Xbox 360 and PC this November. Watch Conan's full interview with Mewes in the video player below. [Source: Kotaku]

The game itself is an entirely new take on the series, because it plays on the Xbox 360's Kinect. You move by dancing and, as you'll soon discover, the game is a mix of soccer and dance. You control Rayman's movement with your body, but you also can push buttons with your hands and feet. If you are a new fan of this game, then you have a good opportunity to download the game in full version. In this game, you can play
