Enter registration and get an ID Log in with your ID Done! Long-term behavior of the mandible. The long-term behavior of the mandible is clinically important because changes in the mandible may be the first sign of temporomandibular joint disorders. As discussed in the current article, there are two basic processes that may affect the mandible and its relationship to the head: volumetric growth and bone resorption. The principal factor responsible for mandibular growth is the mandibular body, and the cranial base plays a minor role. Mandibular bone resorption may be driven by a neurogenic reflex that acts through the trigeminal nerve. It is not possible to predict the long-term behavior of the mandible in an individual subject. Instead, the clinician must determine whether the mandible is growing or resorbing by assessing the shape and size of the mandible. It is difficult to get from Crimea, a peninsula surrounded by a sea of Russian-speaking people, to the Russian mainland. It is also hard to get anywhere else in Crimea. The Autonomous Republic of Crimea, as it is formally known, is one of the three main territories in Ukraine and Russia that Kiev and Moscow have fought over for four years. Only a small number of small villages lie on the road that connects the capital of the Russian Republic, Simferopol, to the western Ukrainian city of Lviv. Crimea's airports, all of which are within Simferopol, are closed, and all flights to Ukraine are subject to the closure of airspace that Moscow has decreed for the war-torn country. For the previous 24 hours, Russian forces had banned any flights into or out of Crimea, in an escalation of pressure on Kiev following its decision last week to restore the autonomy of the region. But now that planes and helicopters belonging to Ukraine's national air carrier and a couple of Russian airlines are flying over the peninsula, it is not clear when the ban will be lifted. A crew of the Ukrainian-registered Antonov AN-26 flying from Kharkiv to Simferopol had to divert their route to Rostov-on-Don in Russia on Wednesday. "Unfortunately, Ukraine is a closed airspace for the moment," said a spokesperson for Kharkiv city council. The reasons why Ukraine is not abiding by Russia's ban are not clear.
