Time was, corporations used to feel that their customers and the public was basically alike, with some people being motivated by status, to follow the company, to get some kind of piece of paper which one day or another they'd work their way up to be promoted. Nowadays, it seems that the world is on a more different note, with people much more eager to change their world and, in their own particular ways, take part of an effort to build a better world. But who are those people, and how do they manage to find the drive to change the world? As it was highlighted in a recent study, one of the biggest problems to solve in the world is poverty. That study states that there are more than 7 billion people in the world living in poverty, that each year, at least 2.7 billion people go hungry and that about 825 million children are suffering from malnutrition. Millions of people are trying to change the world, and many more are joining the fight to fight and change the world we live in. The majority of people live in conditions which are inadequate and children should grow up in a world which is better for them and for those who care for them. But who are those people, and how do they manage to find the drive to change the world? They do it in different ways, and they do it from different motivations. It would be important to understand this, and the problems involved, in order to give them the right tools and knowledge in order to find the motivation to change the world. The Global Poverty Project has been made to investigate the topic of poverty, looking at the efforts to be made to solve it. This tool is designed in order to help you find out whether a certain ID is connected to Yahoo Messenger or not, regardless if it's on the invisible mode or not. Since it's such a simple application, iChecker is being delivered as a very light package, this means it that loads in a second on any computer. The interface is minimal so it all comes down to writing the ID belonging to the persons you wish to check if they are online and pressing the 'Check' button. We've tested it with multiple IDs and we can confirm that iChecker doesn't always work as it should. For example, an ID is not flagged as being online unless the contact uses the dedicated 'Online' mode. In case they're on the invisible mode, iChecker marks the ID as being offline. Otherwise, the app remains very light on computer resources, so it works pretty easy without hampering the computer at all. Among the available features offered by this utility, you have the possibility to add the Messenger ID to your Y!M list, send a message or a file and view the profile of that person. Overall, it's safe to say that iChecker could use a better detection rate but it is still very useful for those who want to sign-up for a new account. With this tool they can check if a particular Yahoo! Messenger ID is available or not. Introduction To all my yahoo friends and to all the people who uses yahoo, i am offering you a tool, that will help you to check if some specific yahoo ID is online or not.
