The questions and answers are presented as SVG with answers on left and questions on the right. The code so far is as follows HTML: ... CSS: .questions { display: flex; margin: 30px; } .question-svg { fill: pink; } .answer-svg { fill: #fffff; } But while SVG styling works perfectly on its own, I also need to style the individual answers based on the order in which they appear. Example of my array and the SVG rendered on a page: var questions = [{ "question": "", "answer": "red", "answers": [ { "key": "key1", "value": "" }, { "key": "key2", "value": "" } ] }];

Q: How to set cron jobs using Java code? My requirement is as follows: I have 500 machines on which we have to take backups every week. I want to make a Java code (or even PHP or python) that will invoke my script on all machines and then execute script, which will in turn invoke my database app to save all the data to database. So, after this, I have to create a cron job on all machines to trigger the MySQL save script once a week. How can I do this? A: There are some libraries you can use in java, that can do this job for you. Or you may write an java program that will run a shell script after a certain time, the shell script will run your cron job A: If you want to trigger a process in Linux with a cron-job, the simplest and most reliable approach is to use a special utility like crontab -e, which can be used to edit a crontab in place. If you do this, the following will execute after every 5 minutes. If you want to run your script at other intervals, add the time in seconds to the appropriate CRON expression. * 5 * * * /path/to/your/script If your script takes a while to run, you might want to use a smaller target interval so that it will not run every 5 minutes, but rather at 5.0, 4.0, 3.5, or 3.0 minutes, like so: * 0-59/30 * * * /path/to/your/script If you need to do something only if you're in a particular directory, you could try: * 10-59/30 * * * cd /path/to/directory && /path/to/your/script Since cron-jobs are supposed to be robust, that particular example will probably work without too much trouble, but there are some edge cases where it will fail. If you need to do something only if you're on certain servers, or if your server is in a particular state, a more reliable approach is to have your Java code send a message to a central receiver, like this: * 10-59/30 * * * /path/to/your/script || /path/to/
