I'm making a deployment utility for a group of Windows boxes and I need to make sure that we have installed every possible extensions on the boxes. Right now I'm working on writing a script to look at the installed extensions for a box and if it doesn't have one, then install it. But, I don't know of any API to list all the extensions that are installed. How would I go about that? A: Get-WmiObject win32_package -filter "name = '*'" If you have multiple Windows accounts you may want to use -Filter parameter. If you need to check for the existence of a particular extension first get it by the name then try to install it with Install-WmiObject. A: If you have full access to the box (or you have it in the form of an image), I recommend using PowerShell. For example: Extensions = Get-WmiObject Win32_Directory -Filter "name = '*'" and Extension = '*' for ($i = 0; $i -lt $Extensions.Length; $i++) { $Extension = $Extensions[$i].Extension Write-Output "Extension '$Extension' found in '$($Extensions[$i].Name)'" } If you don't have administrative privileges you'll need to install 82138339de
