Burst fracture of the proximal femur as a rare complication of intravenous bisphosphonate therapy. A case of a 58-year-old woman who experienced a burst fracture in her left proximal femur 3 months after intravenous bisphosphonate therapy for osteoporosis is described. She had been taking 70 mg of alendronate sodium (ASP) daily for 3 years for the treatment of osteoporosis. She fell and subsequently suffered a left femoral neck fracture. Radiography of the hip revealed a typical intra-articular fracture of the neck of the left femur and a fracture of the lateral subtrochan

What's New In Skype Chess Assistant?

With the Skype Chess Assistant, it is now possible to record your games and upload them directly to your Skype channel. The application also allows you to take snapshots of the game or monitor your opponent's activities (see screenshot). When you first launch Skype Chess Assistant, it asks you to create a user profile. Once this is done, you can use the application to record your game. This can be done either by playing an online game or by using one of your friends on Skype. The interface of the application is really nice and well-designed. The first window is actually a menu bar. On the menu bar are the following buttons:

- Record the game (to start/pause/stop the recording).
- Take a snapshot of the board (to start/pause/stop the capturing).
- Show the move (to show the current move you're making).
- Show the last move (to show the last move you've made).
- Show the score (to show the current score in the game).
- See the board (to show the entire board).
- See the position (to show the position on the board).
- See the current position (to show the current position on the board).
- Show the status of the game (to show the current status of the game).
- Show the last status of the game (to show the last status of the game).
- Quit the application.
- Exit the application.

You can also display the "latest move", the last captured snapshot or the last game status. On the right side of the window you will find the "Play" button, a "Settings" button and an "Quit Skype Chess Assistant" button. The "Play" button will start the actual recording of the game. In case you close the application without stopping the recording, the recording will be paused. You can also quit the application from here, so you're not tied to the recording of the game. The "Settings" button will allow you to change the look of the application. The "Quit Skype Chess Assistant" button will kill the application. And finally, the "Help" button allows you to get more information about this
