Renowned photographer and author Tim Egan has taken a look at the world of literature and its newest obsession – a new series of in-flight entertainment known as “WiFi on the Go” from Delta Air Lines, in partnership with DeltaConnection. Egan, who knows a thing or two about flying (he’s a pilot for Alaska Airlines) was excited to check out a couple of the new in-flight entertainment choices by the Delta/DeltaConnection crew.

Egan, who has had many flights (all of which he took on his iPhone, thereby saving a fortune in photography supplies) was so enthralled by his first flight experience with the new in-flight entertainment options available on American Airlines, he penned an article for CNN. He then has an assignment to write an article for Forbes, but he thought he should first share his experience as a pilot at the controls of a plane. Egan’s article about Delta’s in-flight entertainment options will be published in Forbes.com on Thursday. (The article can be viewed at this link) It’s pretty thrilling, and you’ll be able to read Egan’s experience first-hand by clicking on the link at the top of the post.

In addition, I’ve been using the program to read short fiction online for some years, since the traditional reading of my SFF short fiction via an ebook reader isn’t nearly as useful to me as reading it online using 3e33713323
