Comfortably Warm Winter Weather Tips Did you know that, according to the National Weather Service, the first and third coldest months of the year are November and February? You can often see the winter weather coming in the fall when the temperatures begin to drop earlier than usual. When the leaves start to change colors it usually means that winter is coming on the horizon and we begin to prepare for the coming cold season by taking extra precautions to protect ourselves from the elements. Warm winter weather and cold wet weather are both equally dangerous and although we try to prepare for both, we can't always avoid them. If you find yourself caught out in the elements during winter, make sure you are well-prepared and these helpful tips could save your life. Summer's Thew More Time To Prepare For Winter The reality is that winter has always been around since the beginning of time, and it always will be. With that in mind, summer should be used for growing and preparing for the cold winter weather. The warmer weather gives us more time to prepare for the upcoming cold seasons, and we should be thankful for that. Farmers and gardeners alike will all benefit from having more time to prepare their areas for winter. Light layers are essential to help us through the colder temperatures, along with warm apparel and footwear. We want to ensure that we can keep comfortable while also protecting ourselves from the weather. Having a good set of warm clothing can be a lifesaver on cold winter days. When winter is coming, it's the perfect time to start growing your own food. This will ensure that you are eating well during the cold season when fruits and vegetables are not in season. We can always count on the Food Banks and Soup Kitchens to help those in need when they are in dire need, but we will always have to be vigilant about our own safety. Before the cold season hits, make sure to double check that your house is fully prepared and that you are have all of the essentials. We can't always count on having the powers of the weather in our favor. The best way to prevent a winter weather emergency is to be prepared before the season sets in. You need to check the roof, that the heat is on, and that the water lines are in good shape. Contact your local
