Sometimes, a few tasks are so important that you wish it was possible to send them directly from the Internet, often in a real-time mode, which requires no intermediate downloads. The trick to this is encoding and porting the data and loading it into a database. Fireworks Image Capture Software makes it possible to take pictures of any image that you have on your computer, saving this information into any folder, even into a database. And the best of it, it works just as well as a standalone, in any type of network, without slowing it down. The program can capture images from multiple computers at the same time, choosing the one most suitable to carry out the work. One of the things that you can do with Fireworks Image Capture is to analyze the image. With the software, you can zoom in and out to get a perfect image, you can also do a threshold to separate black and white, then you can further analyze the image and extract data. The capture software offers a large library of effects for enhancing the images. You can use a skin tone, brush, pencil, canvas, gradient, black and white, and paint, adding a special effect or even leaving a mark. With the help of the program, you can easily remove unnecessary objects and remove those elements that you have gotten rid of. Another trick, it is that you can record the image. While recording, all the running process of the capture will be able to save it in the background, so you can focus on doing other tasks. You can also make a video by recording the action of your mouse. Further, there are some limits to keep you from finding too much. The program only allows you to capture a total of 20 images in a row. Even still, the program is not super easy to use. To capture images, you need to open it, select the folder, and then open the image.
