See id. at 709. 6 The government counters that the defendant was not prejudiced by the delay because it provided him notice of the continuance and allowed him to "hear all of the evidence against him." -8- III. M r. Esquivel-Arellano argues that the evidence against him was insufficient to support his conviction. He cites United States v. Veatch, 674 F.2d 1217, 1223 (9th Cir. 1982) for the proposition that "[t]he government is required to show that the defendant 'knowingly and voluntarily consent[ed] to... travel... in order to perform the criminal act or preparatory conduct.'" He maintains that the government presented no evidence regarding his knowledge of the purpose of the trip and therefore failed to show that he engaged in conduct that is criminal in nature. The record belies M r. Esquivel-Arellano's assertion. The government introduced telephone records showing that M r. Esquivel-Arellano spoke with the M exican Consul in St. Louis several times in the days prior to the initiation of the smuggling operation. In addition, M r. Esquivel-Arellano provided the M exican Consul with the person's name, flight number, passport number, and the names of the other passengers to facilitate his travel to the airport. Taken in the light most favorable to the government, the evidence was sufficient to show Esquivel-Arellano's knowledge that the purpose of the trip was illegal smuggling and consent to travel in connection with that criminal activity.
