To investigate the clinical characteristics of young duodenal ulcer patients, and to provide scientific evidence for elucidating its early diagnosis and treatment. The data were collected from the records of 762 duodenal ulcer patients admitted to our hospital between January 2011 and March 2012. The patients were aged 10-29 years, including 317 (41.5%) male and 445 (58.5%) female, averagely age of  $24.7 \pm 4.7$  years. The major complaints were upper abdominal pain, upper abdominal distension and hematemesis. The cases of duodenal ulcer on young people might be related to the infection of Helicobacter pylori. Considering that the clinical manifestation of duodenal ulcer on young people is similar to older patients, once the young people have upper abdominal pain, upper initiated. Imaging of the pediatric knee. Musculoskeletal imaging of the pediatric knee is an important diagnostic tool.

Considerations for imaging include modality (ultrasound, radiography, nuclear medicine, and MR imaging), patient position (supine and/or lateral decubitus), the exam being performed (stress fracture or injury), the age of the patient (infant, toddler, and preschool), and the nature of imaging (knee radiography, magnetic resonance imaging, and MR imaging) and contrast enhancement. Modality choice should be based on the patient's age and anatomy, protocol, cost, and the limits of the machine. Considerations for patient position should include the speed of technology, the degree of pain that can be tolerated, and the patient's tolerance for
