Evidence to support the involvement of leukocyte degranulation in T2DM pathogenesis can be drawn from the similarities between diabetes and neutropenia. Administration of low dose granulocyte colony-stimulating factor (G-CSF) improves neutrophil counts in patients with T2DM ([@B76]). G-CSF promotes neutrophil survival and homing to ischemic tissue in diabetic mice ([@B77]). In humans, G-CSF improves the number and function of neutrophils in subjects with T2DM ([@B78]). G-CSF ameliorates obesity induced insulin resistance in obese diabetic mice through regulation of inflammatory signaling pathways in macrophages ([@B79]). In this regard, similar to G-CSF, cholesterol lowering drugs that ameliorate obesity induced systemic inflammation may thus benefit T2DM. How do cholesterol lowering drugs that target SREBP-2 improve T2DM? {#s6} ===== The main mechanism by which pharmacological inhibition of SREBP-2 lowers plasma cholesterol in humans is by downregulating the expression of the SREBPs and their target genes ([@B80]--[@B82]). However, the impact of SREBP-2 inhibition on whole-body metabolism has not been explored extensively. In this regard, in a clinical trial, ezetimibe significantly reduced plasma and hepatic very low-density lipoprotein (VLDL) cholesterol in healthy subjects ([@B83]). In this regard, if the beneficial the entire webpage without downloading using Ajax? I am creating a search engine. The search results are displayed via AJAX requests. This is fine but the problem is that in some instances, I have to send the entire web page, which is 600-700 kb in size, via AJAX to the browser client. The process of doing this is very slow and undesirable. So my question is, how can I send the entire web page to the client browser in one AJAX request? If there is a query term, a portion of the web page should be loaded, and then when the user clicks on a result, the entire web page should be loaded again. A: Use iframes. Iframes allow you to send partial HTML to a web page, as long as the server-side script the web page is served from supports it. Here's how you use them: Important: if you're not serving your web page from the same domain (server/domain/path) as where you're browsing, you need to use or to allow your JS to load a web page from a different domain. See more here:

Large-scale production of gene-coded tau protein in Escherichia coli.

The possible future treatment of amyloid diseases by gene therapy, using tissue-specific promoters in vectors for the expression of tau protein from a gene carried in a retroviral vector, was investigated. In vitro transcription/translation of the tau gene with the T7 RNA polymerase yielded a tau protein of correct size, which was purified by immunoprecipitation and SDS-PAGE. Western blotting showed that immunoprecipitated tau protein from the Escherichia coli extract reacted with antibodies specific for tau protein in brain extract, but not with antibodies to both tau and one of its binding 3e33713323
