any further action. It speaks when you speak as if you were talking directly into a tape recorder, using a microphone instead of a voice.

LilySpeech employs a sophisticated speech recognition engine to convert what you say into text in your preferred language with diacritics, as you speak. Whether you are a writer, a legal professional or a tourist, you can use this powerful tool to transcribe and store all the information you speak. LilySpeech provides accurate speech recognition in hundreds of languages, tones, accents and dictation dialects with thousands of custom words. LilySpeech is very stable and robust. It works like a charm even if you don't hear the recording, just a text file is stored in the memory of your device. LilySpeech supports any format of text, including: MS Word, Pages, LibreOffice, Google Doc, PDF, HTML, plain text, web searches, emails, Skype calls and any other. LilySpeech has the best voice output quality. The voice output can be raised or lowered according to your preferences. The speech rate, pitch and vocabulary are adjustable. You can change the voice volume as you desire. The app has a built-in timer to ensure that your speaking session is kept under control. LilySpeech is very fast. A word can be spoken as fast as 3-7 times faster than a normal voice. The app works in the background, so you can use another application while it does its job. Free Speech Recognition Editor's Review With Voice Recorder, you can record audio directly to your PC, and then edit it using your own voice recognition app. Edit with your own Voice Recognition App Voice Recorder operates silently on your PC, and it also adds a toolbar to your audio editors. This lets you edit your recordings with all the accuracy of your own voice recognition app. Recognize all kinds of languages Voice Recorder can recognize an astounding number of languages, including many dialects of English, and you can customize its recognition settings to work with any speech you record. Perceived competence and metabolic syndrome among school-age children. The prevalence of metabolic syndrome (MS) in adolescents is increasing at a rapid rate. Most of the studies that have examined the relationship between MS and self-perceptions, physical fitness, and health behavior in children and adolescents have had significant limitations. The purpose of this study was to assess the link between children's perception of their competence and MS, physical fitness, and health behavior. This descriptive, correlational study used convenience sampling to recruit a convenience sample of 105 school-age children (11.5 +/- 1.3 years, 52 boys and 53 girls) from two public schools in an urban setting. Measures included demographics and levels of perceived competence, BMI, total body fat, MS (developed by the National Heart, Lung, and Blood Institute, using the National Cholesterol Education Program Adult Treatment Panel III guidelines), and physical fitness (developed by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention). Multiple regression was used to determine the association between perceived competence and MS, with demographic variables controlled for. The sample was predominantly African American (64%) with a mean BMI of 27.3. The overall MS prevalence was 29.5%. There were significant differences between boys and girls on perceived competence, number of physical activity minutes per week, and BMI (p
