Rated 3 out of 5 by Vincent from Don't believe the hype. Best of all, it's free! Conventional wisdom states that any software that is more than five dollars is just an overpriced disc that you need to go out and buy. This is why I tried Wondershare MePub. Not only did I discover the software was absolutely free, but it ended up being one of the easiest programs to use ever. I like a lot of functionality when it comes to an EPUB converter. If it didn't exist I could probably fill up a whole book with it. But I was a bit disappointed that the software doesn't seem to do quite as much as its "older brother", MePub Editor, does. There are only so many ways you can change the margins, fit the text to the cover, etc. Having said that, if you want something simple and free, MePub Editor is probably your best choice. But if you want something a bit more customizable and power-packed, Wondershare MePub is the way to go. Add your review Would you like to be the first to review “Wondershare MePub”? The Regents of the University of California have denied Berkeley Chancellor Carol Christ's request to have a police department of her own. "Since 1989, the University has provided a police department to protect Berkeley's campus, which includes buildings, the Berkeley Children's Hospital and numerous other facilities," the Regents said in a statement. "UC Berkeley already has a fully functioning, well-equipped and trained police department and does not need to establish a new one." Christ said Monday that the decision reflects a "lack of community investment" in Berkeley. "I think it's unfortunate. It's a lack of community investment that we see now in Berkeley," Christ said. "I think many of the activists say, 'Why are you expecting from us something that the police department does not offer?' " Christ has requested the Berkeley Police Department "be absorbed by our campus police to provide services to the campus community." She said the service will keep a number of officers on campus but would no longer have to expend resources on an entire town's police force. The campus police would use existing police stations. Christ said the district attorney is satisfied that the academy "will produce a well-trained, prepared police force."
