Steve Jobs on the iPhone This device isn't really important to Apple because it's simply a supporting character. We all know that Apple's real strength is in the Macintosh and the iPod. The iPhone is the world's first iPod phone. When the Macintosh was introduced, it instantly became a mainstream computer. Apple hasn't had a computer product that was mainstream since. If you didn't have a Mac, you could argue that you weren't an Apple customer. The iPhone is the catalyst for bringing Apple back to normalcy.
