Successful treatment of recurrent deep vein thrombosis despite the absence of objective risk factors. A patient with recurrent venous thromboses received anticoagulation for more than 2 years after a first episode of venous thrombosis in the same lower limb. The patient is a woman aged 53 years, living in a town with a population of about 500,000, in a low-risk geographic area. She did not have any personal or family history of thrombosis. Immunological evaluation showed a lower risk of thrombosis. She had 2 recurrences, one after 2 months and one after 6 months. The reason for this recurrence could be a paradoxical embolism during the first attack of venous thrombosis. The patient was successfully treated by anticoagulant therapy combined with the sequential administration of warfarin and heparin. In addition, she received low-molecular-weight heparin (Enoxaparin, Clexane). After 1 year, the patient has had no more recurrences. This patient represents a good example of a subgroup of venous thrombotic subjects who are at low risk of recurrence and who have no other risk factors for recurrent thrombosis.

What's New in the?

'I come to you, O Lord, for your love is good,' sang St Francis. He was not a Mary enthusiast. He preferred the preachers of penance, poverty and humility to those of Mary, the glories of martyrdom and crowns of heaven, and it is to them that we turn to ask for this year's prayer: Jesus, Mary and Joseph, pray for us, sinners, in the name of the Father, Son and Holy Spirit. Amen. The Orthodox Church believes that sin has been removed from humanity through the Last Supper and the Passion and Resurrection of Jesus Christ. In the Scriptures, sin appears in connection with the tabernacle and the temple, the Levitical sacrifices, the covenant and law, the monarchy and the Davidic line. The church teaches that sin was carried out by people like Adam and Eve. It was transmitted from generation to generation and, in the pre-Christian era, remained in men's hearts. For this reason it was not removed from them by baptism, confession or contrition. It must be killed, of course, and it may be removed only by the one who was nailed to the cross, the only Son of the Father and God. All who believe in Jesus Christ are called to the same thing: to lead a holy life, and to seek the kingdom of God, the justice of his kingdom, the righteousness of his kingdom, the power of his kingdom, the peace of his kingdom, the purity of his kingdom, the knowledge of his kingdom, the freedom of his kingdom, the light of his kingdom and the salvation of his kingdom. All who believe in Jesus Christ must believe that Christ has accomplished the works that he has promised, and not just fulfilled the minimum requirements that are necessary for his kingdom to come. We must believe that Jesus is the Lord's true and faithful Son who has come as God's King for our salvation. It is from him that we have received the rule of life. He has forgiven us for our past sins. He has made us holy by giving us his body and blood to eat and drink, and his Holy Spirit to drink in. He has given us a new heart and a new spirit, and he has called us to love him as God loves us. He has taken the punishment for our sins on the Cross, has died for our sins, has risen from the dead, and has saved us, and is now at
