A program similar to Photoshop, called Pixlr, from the company Webshots (see Figure 6-2), is a free download. You can download Pixlr at `www.webshots.com/photo/pixlr` or download and install Photoshop Express, which you can find at the same website. Image-editing software lets you create and change images for a variety of purposes, including creating images for your Web site and developing graphics for your business. It's vital to have at least a little knowledge about how to use this type of software because it enables you to do more than you can otherwise do, such as creating repeating patterns and masks and removing objects from images. Image-editing software is a two-part system. The first part is the operating system, or `_OS_`, and the second part is the editing program. The OS provides the software framework for the editing programs, and the editing programs give you the tools with which to work. In the following sections, I outline the OS components of image-editing software, including a sampling of the various editing functions available in these programs. I also cover a sampling of popular editing software programs and highlight some of the great tools and functions they offer. © Zsofia Kovacs 2015 Figure 6-1: Use a range of tools to add and remove various parts of an image. © Zsofia Kovacs 2015 Figure 6-2: Pixlr gives you the tools to edit your photos with easy-to-use interfaces. As a rule, you can use any image-editing program to enhance or manipulate the image, as long as the version you're working with is compatible with the program you choose. However, you won't be able to do anything useful without the proper OS, and the particular version of the OS that you are using will also affect your ability to do anything. With that in mind, I list a few programs that come in both Windows and Macintosh versions and summarize their features. Starting your image-editing program Most programs provide a welcome-to-your-new-high-def-TV setting. When you first open the program, you get greeted with a screen full of options, menus, and toolbars designed to help you perform a variety of common tasks (see Figure 6-3). For now, you just get to know your way around the program; the following sections provide a high-level overview of

Q: Threaded programming What is the best way for threaded programming in java A: I would recommend either the ExecutorService interface or the ThreadPoolExecutor. Using a ThreadPoolExecutor will allow you to do synchronous and asynchronous processing. The advantage of the ExecutorService interface is you can map tasks to threads using the map method. A: To do threaded programming in Java, you can use the ExecutorService interface. This is the standard interface for any ThreadPool, from which you can get new threads or ask the pool for threads that are available to be used. E.g., imagine that you have to do five someUrgent() methods that you need to be done without blocking your main thread, but none of them takes long (they are only called from the main thread). Then, you can write something like this: ExecutorService es = Executors.newFixedThreadPool(5); es.submit(new SomeUrgentRunnable()); es.submit(new SomeUrgentRunnable()); //... es.submit(new SomeUrgentRunnable()); es.submit(new SomeUrgentRunnable()); es.submit(new SomeUrgentRunnable()); es.shutdown(); while (!es.isTerminated()) { } The important thing is that when you call shutdown on the pool, all the threads will be shut down, and the pool can be reused immediately for new work. Furthermore, you can't use a Queue for this purpose. You have to use either an ExecutorService or a ThreadPool. Q: Copy selection on Enter keypress before CSS File load How do I use jquery/javascript to copy a user selection before the CSS file loads? A: First off, you're going to want to use an input type=file to allow a user to upload an image. Without that, you won't be able to access the selected data. Then, you'll be able to access the data using: $('#inputFile').data('file').files Once you have the selected data, you'll need to update the page, then refresh the stylesheet using jQuery's $('head').append('').refresh() (or your equivalent, since the files data isn't data-attributed).

Comedienne Michelle Wolf tore into the president during Saturday's White House Correspondents' Dinner, and her jokes didn't go over well. The Daily Mail reports that White House Press Secretary Sarah Huckabee Sanders walked out of the Black Tusk Public Safety Building following the show. She is expected to release a statement later Saturday. At one point, she joked that the president had "the short thumb of a white supremacist," referring to his habit of insulting media outlets. Wolf also made fun of the president's relationship with Sean Spicer, as she said the former White House press secretary's desk was basically "the best desk job in America." She added: "There's only one problem: Sean Spicer wasn't there, and I don't know where the hot, a- security guy is." Wolf, the 33-year-old Daily Show correspondent, has been outspoken in her criticism of President Donald Trump. During a 2016 episode of Saturday Night Live, she told host Donald Trump Jr. that he "would have a home" on the show. "I have serious questions about why you would want to do this," she said. Wolf most recently appeared on Saturday Night Live's Weekend Update in March and on Saturday's episode of The Daily Show with Trevor Noah.
