

FIFA 22 will be available for PC, Xbox One, PlayStation 4, Nintendo Switch, and mobile devices. FIFA 21 still remains one of the best-selling sports games and was downloaded over 100 million times. Players enjoyed its dynamic light beams, new users, and access to complete player profiles and player data. There were still some issues with the offline gameplay, including the expansion of blacked-out screens and a poor connection when playing offline. FIFA 22 has already collected over one billion player data points, which were generated from player movements and the stats generated from completed matches. These data points were used to create the brand new, new animation and visual effects. For the first time, these motions for all 22 players are captured in one motion capture match. The high-level motions include running, cutting, throwing, pivoting, diving, knocking down, tackling, aerial duels, through balls, headers, crossing, reverse crosses, long passes, high balls, and offensive plays. "When we were creating FIFA 22, we wanted to have as many players as possible in the game. With the increased presence of multiple players on-field we can create even more new and innovative animations," said Jeffrey Wright, Executive Producer at EA SPORTS. "We are excited to be able to enable multiple animations within one player so we can create a more authentic and complete experience for our fans." Read the full article here.
