Orchestral Ableton 8.6.1.1 Orchestral Strings Free Download Ableton Etude 1 in the Piano book is a "Disney Fairies" version of Freaks, one of my favourite songs. I always hoped someone would make an orchestral version of this. Orchestral Tools is available on the following sites: Thank you so much David, for your permission to use this composition, I am honoured! PS: I love the version of this song in the series "Making of Frozen". Hi David, I just love the orchestral music of your compositions. I have a lot of them and I have made several songs. I have some questions in my mind. Is that possible that I have to pay in order to submit my songs in your website? Secondly, how much money does it cost to buy an instrument of a type if I want to learn how to play it? Thirdly, is your website in one language, because I'm Italian and if not, I'm willing to change it so I can read it more easily. Fourthly, can I send you a cover sheet of my song that I would like to be considered for the orchestral instruments? Thanks. Hi Luciano, The costs of purchasing instruments are as follows: VST Instrument - $0.00 FLP Instrument - $0.00 Mixing Instrument - $0.00 Pack of FLP instruments - $0.00 Pack of Mixing instruments - $0.00 There is no cost to submit your songs to me. You do not need to pay anything if you want to buy a FLP instrument or Mixing instrument from the collection - you can download your FLP instrument or Mixing instrument for FREE! English is the default language of this website. I'm working on adding Italian support - as soon as it's available, I'll be able to do this. The subject of the cover sheet is pretty much up to you. Hi David, It's very exciting to see you here posting my first song "Mon Père" in the Piano book! I got to know you by reading your blog via the independent classical music label, Crammed Discs, who I

On a Windows machine or Apple Mac OSX, you can get the free version of Orchestral Tools. Many of the libraries are not free, but the free one is even better. There is a 30 day trial, so you can install the free version, if you want to try it out, and then decide if you want to buy the full version at a later date. All you need to do is choose a library, install the software and then load it into Ableton. The first option is to install directly into Ableton, then you can load the library by clicking on the "orchestral" folder on the libraries panel. If the library comes with a folder, it will put the library files into the "orchestral" folder, and you'll need to load it by going into the "orchestral" folder, and drag the files into Ableton so you can load them into your project. The one thing you should know is that the free version will give you a max of 6 tracks, 6 groups, 6 effects/compressors, no metering, and no panning. This means that you are limited as far as the size of your orchestra. If you decide to go with the free version, you can upgrade with the Pro version, which gives you unlimited tracks and groups, but is only $20. If you want a bigger orchestra, then I suggest you use the.XMBi Orchestral Collection. It's really an incredible collection of orchestral instrument recordings, arranged in 4 to 18 piece packages, with no end. You can choose to have the Orchestral Tools package updated with the latest versions, so you don't have to do that yourself. Once you have the package installed and the update is done, you just load the.XMBi collection in Ableton, and load the packages you want to use. If you only want to use the Orchestral Tools free version, then you might not want to use the.XMBi collection (because it will also give you more tracks, groups, effects, compressors, metering and panning), but if you have a big orchestra that you want to use, then this is one of the best collections on the web. I made this video to show you how to use all of the Orchestral Tools. By the way, I am not affiliated with the company, and I am not paid to do this. If you want to hear what they sound like
