Description: Microsoft Works is an office suite for Windows developed by Microsoft. It includes document viewer, spreadsheet, presentation, drawing, database, drawing and Internet applications. These office apps can be combined with each other to make a work envelope for email, Internet and file exchange. It is the successor to Microsoft Works 6.0. The program has been discontinued since 2010. It was developed and shipped on Windows XP for the 2003, 2007, and 2008 versions. It can be used without a Microsoft Works installation license. It can be used with the reduced functionality of Microsoft Office 12 as a package included with Vista and Windows 7. The suite has only been updated to add new features, while functionality, such as copy and paste has been reduced. Alternatively, a standalone version can be purchased for a user license. It is not compatible with Windows Vista or Windows Server 2003. For Windows 7 and newer releases, it is not available as a standalone program. I want to make a fast-paced, 2D, single-screen RPG. It will use tiles, and it will include strategy (Eg: how to build wall tiles, spike plates etc). I don't want slow-paced RPG turn-based combat with a lot of menus and options. What I'm looking for is a way to quickly get my character attacked. My main concern is that the AI can do what ever it wants during the fight. Are there any real-time RPG combat engines or game tools that people can recommend? I've looked at Unity, but the documentation seems to be years out of date.

Here is a live demo of the problem: When you click "Fade", everything fades. When you click "Empty", it opens and "Fade" is still waiting for the animation to complete. The issue is that I would like this to be a dynamic function where the user can add more functions into the HTML and the order in which they are triggered could change. If you run the demo you will see that "Fade" is called before "Empty" is complete, which messes up the timing. I tried to set a setTimeout function on the.click() function, but that doesn't seem to work. How can I get the "Fade" function to wait for the "Empty" function to finish before firing? A: One way is to perform the operation in the callback of the second animation: function MyAnimation(el, options) { this.el = el; this.options = options; this.start = function() { // animate }; this.stop = function() { // animate to the final state }; this.append = function() { // append and start animations return this.start(); }; this.click = function() { // animate to final state
