Edits are created with a combination of layer masks and layer adjustments to create better-looking photos. Icons represent the different editing options. In this tutorial, Photoshop user, HDpixel, walks users through a series of images to illustrate her tutorial. Edits and layer masks were first introduced in Photoshop 5 and are used to overlap an image to provide a background that is transparent or simply cover up background elements in an image. Creating layer masks is an important and fun part of editing images in Photoshop. Layer masks can range from a transparent one to a solid one. Layer adjustments represent image or camera adjustments, such as auto exposure, color, curves, color balance, levels and more. Layer masks give you a lot of options for creating your own unique edits that can range from simple to complex. In this tutorial, HDpixel will walk you through a series of images to show you how to use layer masks and layer adjustments to create unique edits in Photoshop. The images used in HDpixel's tutorial were created in Photoshop CS6, and later versions can use the same techniques. Note: HDpixel used Adobe-created filter effects in this tutorial, so be sure to have those working in the editor before attempting to recreate the techniques in this tutorial. This tutorial is best viewed in full screen mode. In Photoshop, the layer mask options can be found in the Edit menu in the Layers panel. The layer mask options can be found in the Layers panel. Select the layer in the Layers panel with the soft edge on the bottom left of the panel. Select Edit > Layer Mask > Add Layer Mask. The Layer Mask options will be displayed in the bottom right of the panel. Select a mask type from the drop-down menu. In this tutorial, HDpixel will be using the Soft Brush Selection. Select a brush size in the Brush Size option. In HDpixel's tutorial, she will be using a brush size of 100 pixels. When you have chosen a brush size, you can then click on the area on the image that you want to mask. HDpixel will be using a soft edge brush type in this tutorial. Click and drag from the edge of the image to the image's edge. The Brush Opacity value will reflect the transparency of the brush, and the brush will move around the area of the image that you clicked on

Q: Eclipse Hangs in Other Activities I am running eclipse 3.7.2. I have written a web app to test the server and all works well. I then want to do a swing app for another group to replicate the server but when they start eclipse, it hangs. Here is the error: I have tried looking at my logs but can't see anything interesting: Can anyone help? A: If you're getting a crash, that means you were doing something more than just running a web server. Any time I see a random crash, it's going to happen when trying to bring an unknown PID up. Try stopping your web server and then start the second one. UPDATE The second PID is running on a different thread. That thread is an Android activity. Just like you can't open a second web server process, you can't open a second Android app. OK, they've unblocked you. Your problem was that you have multiple activities. Here's a short explanation: Eclipse runs in a single process called the process hosting the wizard/launcher. The process hosting the launcher runs in another process called the system process. A more technical explanation: In both Windows and Linux, the system process only starts one of any of those file like C:/Program Files/eclipse/eclipse.exe or /usr/bin/eclipse. Within the system process, there is one thread per window and one for the system itself. When you start a new window, that thread is run in a process called the foreground process. A different thread in the system process will run when a window is detached. A different thread in the system process will run when you launch a new app. In a process hosting a window, all of the process wide threads (the system thread and the window's threads) are tied to the owning window. Multiple activities will run in a window, but they can't be tied to each other. They can't run in the foreground process and run in the system thread. Eclipse is very smart about this, and it's why every time you select a new web page in the browser, it tells you that the system process is restarting. It is perfectly safe to keep a second activity open in Eclipse, but you just have to be really really careful about not starting the activity inside the system process
