Note Because Photoshop is so popular, the only thing you have to be sure of when you use it is that there will always be someone more than willing to answer questions on it. The most popular vector graphics editor, Illustrator, offers many of the same features as Photoshop, plus some special abilities. However, if you're a pro looking to create hand-drawn illustrations that go beyond the capabilities of Photoshop's built-in, high-quality vector graphics features (such as pattern-matching options), then Illustrator is the tool for you. ## The Photoshop Interface As an Image Editor application, Photoshop's interface can be intimidating at first glance. But the interface is designed to be an easy-to-use, no-nonsense tool that enables you to get some incredible creative results. You can start off working on a particular image in Photoshop while you work on another project on another part of your hard drive. When you're done with that image, you can save it as a file or send it off to the Internet to share with your friends. ## Photoshop Basics: The Layers Panel Photoshop's interface layout might be the most intimidating aspect of the program, but the most important aspect of Photoshop is the Layers panel, or the Layers panel (Figure 2-

If you want to start your journey in Photoshop, Photoshop Elements or other graphics editing software, you don't need to be an expert. However, there are some processes which a beginner may need to learn to become an image editor, graphic designer or web designer. In this article, we will show you how you can use Photoshop to create a website mock-up. You can get started with little to no knowledge of graphic design. To begin, you need to open Adobe Photoshop. Make sure that you are using the version for Windows PC. (Mac version is available here.) Once you open the Photoshop software, click the File menu and select New. On the new screen, click "Photoshop" or "Photoshop Elements" and save it as the "Theme 04" Photoshop document or Photoshop document. For the "Photoshop Elements" document type, click "Elements Document" or "Elements" and save it as the "Theme 04" Photoshop document or Photoshop document. Once you click "Save", you will be redirected to the new window. You should see a "Photoshop" or "Photoshop Elements" sub menu as you see in the image below. Type the "Theme 04" Photoshop document name and click OK. Make sure that the Create New Document checkbox is selected. Then click Next. You will be asked to choose a location for the new Photoshop document. Click Next. This is the mockup that will be used to create the website design. Choose the "Atlas Mockup" option and click Create. Then click OK. You will see a new folder on the left of the screen. Open this folder on your computer to see the mockup file. You will see a few files, but only the "Atlas.psd" file will be used for this article. Let's customize the mockup. To customize the mockup, go to the File menu and select Edit. This will open the Photoshop document. Here, you will see a variety of items under the "Layers" palette. Let's get started. Click on the "Background" layer to select it 05a79ccef

Q: How do I add a 1px gap between list items? I have a list with a bottom border and I want a 1px gap between the items. Here is the CSS `ul.list-unstyled{ float: left; margin: 20px; padding: 10px 0; border-bottom: 1px solid #c4c4c4; } ul.list-unstyled li{ margin: 20px; } ul.list-unstyled li:first-child { margin-left: 0; } ul.list-unstyled li span { display: block; }` Here is a jsfiddle. I tried setting a padding, but the padding expands to the width of the border. So I can't get it to the 1px. Any ideas? A: You should simply use padding-bottom instead of padding: `ul.list-unstyled{ float: left; margin: 20px; padding-bottom: 1px; border-bottom: 1px solid #c4c4c4; }` JSFiddle With padding: like you've tried `ul.list-unstyled{ float: left; margin: 20px; padding: 10px 0; border-bottom: 1px solid #c4c4c4; } ul.list-unstyled li{ margin: 20px; } ul.list-unstyled li:first-child { margin-left: 0; } ul.list-unstyled li span { display: block; } ul.list-unstyled{ float: left; margin: 20px; padding: 10px 0; border-bottom: 1px solid #c4c4c4; } ul.list-unstyled li{`

What's New in the?

Overnight heejays have been uncharacteristically quiet, making it seem as though all the busiest people on the planet are going home or putting their feet up. But one way or another, they've finished preparing for the night shift and the beginning of the new day. The sun is setting, and for the next few hours, we're going to be consuming all the coffee we can handle. Electric Jukebox To be honest, we don't really need to be reminded. But the AMC Theater in downtown St. Paul has added more variety to the entertainment experience than any other mall we've been to before. Its four movie-theater screens are painted in bright, eye-catching colors, and its programming is focused on telling a story. Maybe you want to watch the magical realism film Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon. Or the adventure film Pirates of the Caribbean. Or the drama The Help. The films are projected onto a screen in the center of the theater, while sound comes from speakers on the walls. Once the movie is complete, it's time for part two. Here's how it works: Once the movie's over, customers can ask for a seat next to the speakers, and in their seat, some of them start jamming out. Using smartphone apps, the movie screen then becomes a dance floor for the audience. Like I said, this part of the AMC Theater is on the cutting edge of movie theater sound. Mood Lighting At the corner of 10th and Kellogg avenues in downtown, large planters lead to a grassy yard that holds trees and a flagpole. Painted the night before, the trees are decorated with lanterns. At 8 p.m., they started lighting up, and the whole scene looked like a magical scene from the film The Nightmare Before Christmas. You can tell it's Halloween because it's the season of pumpkins, ghosts and witches. In the past, St. Paul has celebrated Halloween with live music. But this year the music came via the sounds of wind chimes and a DJ. Safety First A staple of any Halloween celebration is a parade and floats. This year the safety-conscious crowd would not be disappointed. First up was the College of St. Scholastica in Duluth, Minn. The College of St. Scholastica is one of the
