You can use Photoshop to apply professional-level effects to photos with each of its tools or modules, including the Channels panel, which gives you access to tonal and color information, and other editing panels, such as Exposure, Curves, Levels, and Shadows/Highlights. Photoshop offers powerful image retouching, effects, and similar tools. You can use Photoshop to create new raster images, swap and layer images, apply filters, adjust image brightness and contrast, sharpen images, blur images, crop photos, create vector-based graphic elements, and manipulate text. The basic elements are font, color, shape, pattern, and adjustments such as exposure, contrast, and color. There are more than 50 million Photoshop users worldwide. Photoshop is fully supported on Windows (both 32-bit and 64-bit versions), macOS, and Linux. Depending on the operating system you're using, you will have the ability to use Photoshop or Photoshop Elements. Both programs will be on the software store to download for free. Photoshop has its own Adobe Creative Cloud app, where you can access Photoshop and other Adobe apps. In addition, Photoshop also has its own Adobe apps store, where you can find apps and plug-ins that can help with adjusting images or enhancing your photo. Top Tips When Using Photoshop Select the proper tool to accomplish the task — In general, it is best to use the most appropriate tools for the task at hand. For example, if you're editing an image of a dinosaur, don't use the Noise Reduction filter to remove spots from the dinosaur's face because the spots won't be visible in the final image. Use an eraser to remove dust spots. Don't use Photoshop's Keylight feature — Keylight uses proprietary technology that makes it difficult for other programs to understand Photoshop's selections. Don't use this feature; it will get in the way of your edits and not allow you to use other parts of Photoshop. Don't use Photoshop's Warp function — Use the Free Transform tool instead to crop your image. Don't use the Liquify filter — Use the Collapse tool or Free Transform tool instead. Don't use the Liquify filter — It is too slow. Don't use the Auto-Levels feature — Use the Brightness/Contrast slider instead. Don't use the Dodge/Burn tool — It will only work with layers — Be careful with it because if you

Q: Ceiling light for newwall or oldwall? I'm looking at installing a ceiling light in an unused corner of my house. The light will hang down from a newel. My house has old walls. I've purchased a matching newel. Should I use newel or old wall throughout or can I mix and match as I please? A: I would not. The footprint of the newel will be much larger than the old wall. If you don't have any molding, the gap will be very obvious. If you have molding, the gap may not be obvious, but you will still be noticeable. A: Old-old is like an educated guess. The newel will be larger. If you haven't got molding, make sure that the gap is hidden. If you've got molding, then you can essentially make it whatever you want. Edit: As has been pointed out, you've got a larger footprint for the newel, and so you'll either need more molding to hide the gap, or you'll need to put something on the wall to make the two meet. Impact of marginal leakage following gingival biopassage and cold currettes on attachment levels of gingival margin. The aim of this in vitro study was to investigate the effect of marginal leakage of gingival biopassage on attachment level of gingival margin. Sixty-four upper posterior teeth were selected for the study. Experimental sites were treated by marginal fissure biopassage using stainless steel burnisher and by cold currettes in between 21 to 28th days. The same sites were assessed during the biopassage procedure with a leakage marker. Teeth in group 1 were treated by burnisher, and teeth in group 2 were treated by cold curette. The data was analyzed statistically by ANOVA, t-test and chi-square test. Both the burnisher and cold currettes caused significant increase in marginal leakage ( $p=0.005$ ,  $p=0.000$ ) respectively in comparison to baseline, but the marginal leakage was more with cold curette ( $p=0.000$ ). Data indicates that marginal leakage of gingival biopassage leads to gingival recession.Q: Error 'Actions must be asynchronous.' when calling the test automation api I am

Delaware-based startup Boxacle got a ton of local media attention when it raised $3.25M at a $20M-plus valuation in March. The company combines its own index fund with the Index Fund of America (IFA), using the IFA's Boxacle Fund for tracking. Yesterday, Boxacle announced that it closed its second fund at $103.7M. (The first fund was $65.5M.) Here's Boxacle CEO Jason Lemkin: The (second) Boxacle Fund will be used for the Boxacle Marketshare Fund, which according to the company, invests in private companies in the finance, ecommerce and payments sectors. Lemkin says the company has run out of capital for the current marketshare fund, but he sees the company growing into many new product areas, like its investment in ZestFinance, a payments system that specializes in providing "near-instant, digital money transfers" through the iPhone. Lemkin says the Boxacle Fund is part of an overall strategy that will build a "new paradigm of investing." According to Lemkin: The future of investing will be an index fund of the above-market and below-market investments of Boxacle, as a proxy for public index funds. If you bought the Boxacle Fund today, you would be buying the Boxacle Fund next week. That means boxacele will be able to quickly manage and move its capital to invest in the best companies, even when others would be holding off and choosing "balanced" portfolios. Via VentureBeat: The strategy appears to be a major departure for Boxacle, which until now had a focus on capital market index investing. One of the more interesting things about Boxacle was that the company's website currently makes reference to a company known as Index Fund of America, which apparently owns Boxacle (via the Boxacle Fund). One thing Lemkin will admit: Boxacle does not have a lot of unique technology. The company says it "writes" its web-based applications in Javascript, and that it uses an "in-house technology stack" in order to build and test new products. However, there is one interesting use for Boxacle. (At this time, the company is not pursuing a Series A round, but rather planning to use
